ELOQUENT BRYAN.

Bryan's speech at Baltimere on Saturday a stringent examination into the facts, bears all the ear-marks of an attempt to carry allegiance by the power of words.

The fight had been waged not only on the floor of the convention but in committee rooms, in corridors. hotel lobbies, in the streets of the Maryland city, and with each hour that passed the split in Denocracy had widened and new cracks appeared. That speech touched the heights and the depths of Bryan's idea of progressivism, and was calculated to point out to the convention the path it should follow, and by unplication the Moses to lead the weary Democrats from the wilderness of turmoil and strife. Bryan could tion if he had appealed to the convention openly ea's 79-foot rise.

to name him for President. But—the convention did not stampede. True, there ensued a scene of wild uproar, and the mu passioned rhetoric of the Nebraskan brought the delegates to their feet, some with cheers and some with hisses and some with derisive calls.

Sixteen years before, Bryan's eloquence had upset the Democratic program and won for him the nomination in a stampede that classes as among the most remarkable political events of the century. And Bryan's eloquence, if report is correct, is still undimmed, his glittering, magte phrases yet untarnished.

The difference is that sixteen years ago Bry an came before his party with a Future and he is now before it with a Past. ### SOCIALISM OR FRAUD?

Impercliment proceedings brought against Federal Indge C. H. Hanford of Seattle have indersed to brow awakened extraordinary interest in the case of people cer any v Leonard Olsson, the Socialist, whose certificate ity of the Socialist, of citizenship was canceled. The jurist's action brought down a storm of criticism, not only The bull has been REET from the socialist press, which was to be expect ground hat more it many heads are passenger on the Manua Kea after a the waterline on the starboard, giving ed; but from scores of representative newspapers before the Superval. throughout the country, most of which declared Judge Hanford guilty of barring a man from eral public school of large as - -S. E. Chroniele.

The facts in the case have been curiously and perhaps sometimes purposely distorted and misinterpreted. The plain statement is this:

Olsson's petition for naturalization was filed on September 27, 1909, and he was admitted to citizenship on January 10, 1910, when he swore! that he was "attached to the principles of the means that it can be nearly if not ported for duty yesterd y was a sign- the Seafarer made fast. Later, Olsson appeared as a witness for another alien seeking naturalization, and swore then that "he was not attached to the principles With work actually accomplished; the hernia was performed. The quotation is part of the affidavit in support of the Government's petition to cancel his citizenship building. But if no bork has been waitan delegates to the Democratic papers. It is plain, according to the above facts, that the judge's decision was given for alleged false swearing, and the Socialistic beliefs involved in the case only indirectly led to the cancellation of the citizenship papers.

American citizens are justly jealous of their rights as citizens, and it is natural that any curtailment of these rights should be regarded with suspicion.
